

Controlling Health Care Costs IS OUR COMMON INTEREST

Our insurance company “bureaucrats” get lots of fan mail.

Given all unflattering things said about health insurance companies in the past year, this may come as a surprise. Not when you consider that we employ experienced clinicians—doctors, nurses, pharmacists—whose job is not only to work with health care providers to ensure that cost-effective, evidence-based medical treatments are ordered for your employees. They also provide compassionate support as your employees receive treatment during a major illness, or learn to better manage a chronic condition, or finally quit smoking for good. These things not only help control health care costs, they also make for a growing fan base.
